

Catrin Gersdorf

Beyond the Vernacular: Landscape and the African American Cultural Tradition

BIO

Catrin Gersdorf currently holds a research position at the interdisciplinary research cluster “Languages of Emotion” at the Free University Berlin, where she also teaches American literature at the John F. Kennedy Institute for North American Studies. In addition, she regularly teaches at the English Department at SWPS (Warsaw). The author of The Poetics and Politics: Landscape and the Construction of America (Rodopi 2009), she received her PhD in 1987 and her Habilitations degree in 2004, both from the University of Leipzig