

The 1960s: Legacies

ABSTRACT

We are not looking for presentations that simply narrate the events but rather the purpose is to explore the lasting legacy of the seminal events of that decade. We invite scholars to submit proposals for individual papers or panels that contextualize the seminal political, social, and cultural events that reverberated through the remainder of the twentieth century. These events not only speak about the values, emotions and aspirations of those times but over the years they have acquired new interpretations and relevance which are of equal importance to us. For example, the organizers would welcome papers or panels that addressed these topics:

- Civil Rights
- The Women's Movement
- Student Movement/the Counterculture
- Foreign Policy
- The Vietnam War
- Domestic Politics
- Social and Cultural Events

Of course, the topics listed here only scratch the surface, and the organizers hope to see papers/panels that analyze a variety of other issues and their legacy.
